

Dear Honorable Martin Glenn,

I am writing to you regarding the discrepancy in the distribution amount I received from the Celsius bankruptcy proceedings compared to the expected claim value based on my crypto holdings at the time of the bankruptcy filing.

Background

On July 13, 2022, when Celsius Network filed for bankruptcy, my account held the following crypto assets:

10.18 BCH valued at approximately $1,023 (at $100.54 per coin)

206.5 LINK valued at approximately $1,253 (at $6.07 per coin)

99.8 UNI valued at approximately $600 (at $6.01 per coin)

The total value of my crypto holdings at the time of the bankruptcy filing was approximately $2,875.

Claim Amount and Distribution Discrepancy

According to the court-approved bankruptcy plan, Earn creditors like myself were entitled to receive a 57.9% distribution of their allowed claim amount. Based on my total holdings of $2,875, my expected claim amount should have been around $1,664. However, the Celsius team has stated that my allowed claim amount was only $10.88, and the distribution I received was a mere $7.99 in Bitcoin (BTC) and Ethereum (ETH). This distribution amount is significantly lower than the expected $1,664 based on the 57.9% rate applied to my approximate $2,875 claim value.

Attempts to Resolve the Issue

I have repeatedly reached out to the Celsius team, providing detailed information about my crypto holdings at the time of the bankruptcy filing and requesting a transparent breakdown of how my claim amount and distribution were calculated. Unfortunately, the responses I have received have been inadequate and have failed to provide a clear explanation for the substantial discrepancy between my expected claim value and the actual distribution amount.

Request for Intervention

Given the lack of a satisfactory resolution from the Celsius team, I am respectfully requesting the court's intervention in this matter. I kindly ask that the court review my specific case and ensure that my claim amount and distribution are calculated accurately and fairly, in accordance with the approved bankruptcy plan and my crypto holdings at the time of the bankruptcy filing.

I would be grateful for the opportunity to present my case and the supporting evidence in greater detail if required. I am committed to resolving this issue through proper legal channels and ensuring that I receive the distribution amount I am rightfully owed based on my crypto holdings and the terms of the bankruptcy plan.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to a fair resolution of this matter.

Sincerely,

Solomon Tadesse

Dear Celsius Distribution Team,

I am writing to express my frustration with the lack of a satisfactory response from your team regarding the significant discrepancy between the expected claim amount based on my crypto holdings at the time of Celsius' bankruptcy filing and the distribution amount I received.

Despite multiple attempts to obtain a clear and detailed explanation for this discrepancy, the responses I have received have been inadequate and have failed to address the specific concerns I have raised.

As outlined in my previous emails, my total crypto holdings on the bankruptcy filing date were approximately:

10.18 BCH valued at around $1,023 (at $100.54 per coin)

206.5 LINK valued at around $1,253 (at $6.07 per coin)

99.8 UNI valued at around $600 (at $6.01 per coin)

This amounts to a total of approximately $2,875. With the 57.9% claim rate mentioned in your communications, my expected claim amount should have been around $1,664. However, the distribution amount I received was only $7.99, which is significantly lower than the expected $1,664 (57.9% of $2,875).

I have provided these details multiple times, but I have not received a transparent breakdown of how my claim amount of $10.88 and the distribution of $7.99 were calculated. This lack of clarity and cooperation is unacceptable, given the substantial discrepancy involved.

If I do not receive a satisfactory response addressing this issue within the next 7 days, I will be forced to escalate this matter by submitting a formal complaint to the bankruptcy court overseeing the Celsius case. To facilitate this process, I kindly request that you provide me with the full name of the presiding judge and the mailing address for the bankruptcy court, or a link where I can find this information.

I sincerely hope that we can resolve this issue amicably and transparently without the need for further legal action. However, if your team continues to be uncooperative, I will have no choice but to seek the court's intervention to ensure that I receive the appropriate distribution amount based on my crypto holdings and the terms of the approved bankruptcy plan.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter.

Regards,

Solomon

Dear Celsius Distribution Team,

I am writing to follow up on the discrepancy between the expected claim amount and the distribution I received based on my crypto holdings at the time of Celsius' bankruptcy filing.

As per my previous emails, my total crypto holdings on the bankruptcy filing date were approximately:

10.18 BCH valued at around $1,023 (at $100.54 per coin)

206.5 LINK valued at around $1,253 (at $6.07 per coin)

99.8 UNI valued at around $600 (at $6.01 per coin)

This amounts to a total of approximately $2,875. With the 57.9% claim rate mentioned in your communications, my expected claim amount should have been around $1,664. However, the distribution amount I received was only $7.99, which is significantly lower than the expected $1,664 based on the stated claim rate. I have provided these details multiple times, but I have not received a clear explanation for this substantial discrepancy. I would greatly appreciate if you could review my specific account details and provide a detailed breakdown of how my claim amount of $10.88 and the distribution of $7.99 were calculated. It is crucial that I understand the reasoning behind these figures, as they seem to contradict the information provided regarding the 57.9% claim rate.

If there has been an error or oversight in calculating my claim or distribution, I kindly request that you rectify it and provide me with the appropriate distribution amount based on my holdings at the time of the bankruptcy filing.

I am hopeful that we can resolve this issue promptly and transparently. Please let me know if you need any additional information from my end.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Solomon

Hi,

Your response is very confusing. Are you asking me to wait until you start looking at my specific claim questions? Or are you simply repeating what I asked regarding my claim and distribution amounts without providing any information about how you arrived at those amounts? How did you come up with $10.88 claim amount for the account with 10.18 BCH valued about $1023 at the time of the bankruptcy filing date ($100.54/coin), 206.5 LINK valued about $1253 at the bankruptcy filing date ($$6.07/coin) and, 99.8 UNI valued about $600 at the bankruptcy filing date ($6.01/coin). Total: about $2875

57.9% claim of crypto value is about $1664?

Hello Solomon,

Thank you for contacting us Stretto support, we appreciate your patience as we continue to work through individual creditor inquiries quickly as possible.

The amount of your claim as of the petition date was $10.88 and your distribution amount is $7.99. The distribution amount reflects your total claim amount.

If you did not request to withdraw your eligible Custody assets by February 28, 2024, these assets were converted to BTC/ETH as described in the Plan. Your distribution will be made through an assigned Distribution Partner and you will receive further communication about this process via email.

For more information about how distribution amounts were calculated please refer to the Plan [Docket Nº 4289], the Disclosure Statement [Docket Nº 3332], and the Notice of Effective Date [Docket Nº 4298] for information about the composition of distributions and estimated recoveries. The Notice of Effective Date includes an illustrative recovery for an Earn creditor (see Appendix A).

I'm very sure you already know the screenshot I attached previously wasn't to calculate my claim. It was just to show you that the amount of coins I had in the app.

Here's a brief summary of my balance and my expected claim.

BCH: 10.18 coins valued about $1023 at the time of the bankruptcy filing date ($100.54/coin)

LINK: 206.5 coins valued about $1253 at the bankruptcy filing date ($$6.07/coin)

UNI: 99.8 coins valued about $600 at the bankruptcy filing date ($6.01/coin)

Total: about $2875

57.9% claim of crypto value is about $1664

Could you please tell me if my calculation is wrong or there was a mistake from your side.

Thanks,
Solomon
